

Where to find us:

Waterford Healing Arts Trust is located beside St Teresa's Building on the grounds of University Hospital Waterford (UHW).

To access Waterford Healing Arts Trust Centre for Arts and Health, please enter UHW from the main entrance roundabout to the Hospital. Then take the first left (directly after the Bus Stop) through the barrier into the public car park. Waterford Healing Arts Trust is the second last building on the left (just before you reach St Teresa's Unit).

Dementia Friendly Art Project at Waterford Healing Arts Trust

What is it?

An opportunity to look at and talk about paintings from the art collection at University Hospital Waterford.

Who is it for?

People living with dementia and a friend/companion/spouse/carer.

Where is it on?

At Waterford Healing Arts Trust Centre for Arts & Health (beside St Teresa's Building), University Hospital Waterford

When is it on?

Thursday 21 March at 2.30pm

How long does it go on for?

The session will last one hour and will finish with a cup of tea.

Who will be there?

Artist Caroline Schofield, who is trained and experienced to run this kind of project. She will be joined by one other artist, Jill Bouchier.

Where can I find out more information?

From Catherine Murphy, Occupational Therapist, WICOP, St Teresa's Unit, University Hospital Waterford (051) 842545 or Maeve Butler, Waterford Healing Arts Trust (051) 842664

Why is this project taking place?

To give people the opportunity to enjoy art, to talk about paintings, colour and artists, in a supportive setting. We also hope this will give you and your friend/companion a new experience to enjoy and talk about.

Do I need to know about art to take part?

No, you don't need to have any experience or knowledge of art to take part. We will all be learning about and enjoying these beautiful and interesting paintings together.

How much will it cost?

It's free!

What is Waterford Healing Arts Trust?

Waterford Healing Arts Trust is an arts and health organisation based at University Hospital Waterford. We bring arts experiences, such as music, creative writing and painting, to patients in the hospital and other healthcare settings in the community. Our team is made up of professional artists who are trained to work in healthcare settings and who bring art to the bedsides of patients in the hospital.
